

Understanding the Protections and Cost of Title Insurance

- Unlike most insurance products, title insurance is a one-time premium that protects homebuyers as long as they own their home and covers lenders for the life of the mortgage.
- Much of the cost of title insurance goes into the upfront, curative work that is done before anyone reaches the closing table. Title professionals search the public records and often cure defects.
- The unique protection that title insurance offers is against any defects that were not found during the title search, such as fraud, forgery, unrecorded liens, etc. A significant proportion of claims are for items that could not be found in a public record search.
- Title insurance also includes a duty to defend, which covers all legal fees if a dispute over ownership arises. This means that title companies will fight to keep consumers in their home, at no additional cost to them.
- While other forms of insurance have seen rate increases in recent years, the cost of title insurance coverage actually has decreased 7.8% nationally since 2004.
- Title insurance is comprehensively regulated at the state level by departments of insurance.
- Title insurance companies are required to file their policies and rates with state regulators to ensure they are fair, non-discriminatory and adequately protect consumers.
